

the Digital National Security Archive

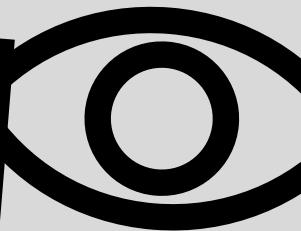

a zine

Available via ProQuest

at your University

Search the holdings of the National Security Archives (NSA) at the George Washington University.

Since 1985 the NSA has utilized the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) to declassify some of the most consequential records of our time.

Access declassified
government documents

Learn about the impact of high-level
government decisions

Features include:

Access to primary source documents

Specialty Indexing and Abstracts

Professionally
curated collections

Images of each document

B5

This image shows a document page that has been heavily redacted with black bars. The visible text includes:

- At the top right, the letters "B5".
- A large rectangular redaction box covers the central portion of the page.
- On the left side, there is a vertical sidebar with the following text:
 - "SEARCH" at the top.
 - Below it are three links: "Next Bill", "Prev Bill", and "Bill List".
 - Underneath these is a link to a PDF file: "GPO's PDF version of this bill".
 - Further down is a link to the "Congressional Record": "References to this bill in the Congressional Record".
 - At the bottom of the sidebar, it says "Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives (Introduced in the House)" followed by "H.R. 4061H".
- On the right side, there is another set of links:
 - "GO TO New Bills Search Home Page Help".
 - "Link to the Bill Summary & Status file".
 - "UNCLASSIFIED RELEASED IN PART PLE".
 - "Full Display - 5,714 bytes [Help]".
 - A handwritten note at the bottom right says "What a bunch of /".

See for yourself.

Ask your librarian or reference archivist for more information or visit with the QR code below:

images sourced from the National Security Archive.